

List of forms received for cleaning products for use, handling or storage in workplaces

Certain cleaning products are regulated under the Hazardous Products Act (HPA), Hazardous Products Regulations (HPR) and, if applicable, the Hazardous Materials Information Review Act.

Health Canada is expediting access to cleaning products to address product shortages during the COVID-19 pandemic. Manufacturers, importers and sellers are responsible for complying with the above-mentioned Acts and Regulations.

There are potential hazards when using, handling or storing a hazardous product in the workplace. Workers should be aware of these hazards.

Safety information for cleaning products regulated under the HPA/HPR is available through the list of forms below. These forms include a link to the importer's website, which contains safety information required under Canadian legislation. This information is in both official languages and consists of the Safety Data Sheet and label text details.

Employers using products found on the list are encouraged to refer to this information and to communicate it to their employees. Employers and workers should also contact their occupational health and safety regulatory agency for any information about workplace safety.

It is important to note that:

- Health Canada has not evaluated the products on this list.
  - The importers of the products on this list have described them as cleaning products for use, handling or storage in workplaces
  - As with all hazardous products regulated under the HPA/HPR, Health Canada has not reviewed the products for efficacy in killing bacteria or viruses, including the novel coronavirus responsible for COVID-19. The products on the list are neither approved nor endorsed by Health Canada for those purposes.
